

David “Da” S. Knowlton, Ed.D.
Designer, Creator, and Innovator for Improved Learning Practices

Dr. Da Knowlton is an educator, author, speaker, consultant, and artisan. For the past thirty years, Dr. Knowlton has passionately advocated for the power of creativity, education, and self-directed learning as means of improving organizations and changing lives. He has presented his ideas at national professional-development events, including conferences sponsored by Training Magazine, The United States Distance Learning Association, and The American Association for Adult and Continuing Education. Dr. Knowlton has written over seventy-five articles and book chapters in the areas of education, employee performance improvement, creativity, communication, and the arts. As a public intellectual, he has written for the mainstream press and has appeared on regional television programs and internet podcasts.

Dr. Knowlton has conducted interactive workshops for a wide-range of institutions, including The University of Tennessee’s School of Pharmacy, Time Warner Communications, and Anheuser-Busch. His workshops target the practical skills that students, employees, and volunteers need to elevate their own learning and the success of their organization. The hands-on activities motivate workshop participants to craft a more creative professional presence and a deeply fulfilling personal life.

Dr. Knowlton currently is co-host of The Learning Vibes Podcast and regularly presents formal speeches, informal coffee talks, and keynotes to a wide-range of audiences, including high school students, church goers, arts patrons, university faculty, non-profit volunteers, and corporate personnel. Audiences praise him for being inspirational, humorous, and high energy.

Let Dr. Knowlton bring his enthusiastic and substantive approach to your organization through workshops, presentations, or consultations in any of the following areas:

- Design thinking
