Art and Design at SIUE

The Department of Art and Design, in the College of Arts and Sciences at SIUE, provides an excellent studio art program for its majors, minors and post-graduate students in newly built and renovated facilities offering state-of-the-art technology. While students are encouraged to develop their creative, intellectual and technical potential in the visual arts, they also have the opportunity to pursue minors in diverse areas such as anthropology, business, geography, history and more. Emphasis is placed on the development of conceptual and visual vocabulary, as well as the ability of students to discuss their work within historical and contemporary contexts. At SIUE, the Department of Art and Design offers a core foundation of skills that students can build upon in order to produce meaningful and engaging works with diverse objectives. Our students are challenged to view themselves as professionals on the first day they step into a classroom.

Students in the studio art program at SIUE can take coursework in:

- Ceramics
- Drawing
- Graphic Design
- Metalsmithing
- Painting
- Photography
- Printmaking
- Sculpture
- Textiles

At SIUE, all areas of study are taught by faculty who are practicing art professionals who, maintaining vigorous national exhibition schedules, make SIUE one of the most comprehensive studio art programs in the region.

Career Opportunities

An undergraduate degree in studio art prepares majors for a wide variety of careers, including work in museums, art galleries, cultural institutions, and academia. Our students are also well-prepared for graduate school. Some of our recent graduates are pursuing advanced degrees at Indiana University, the University of Nebraska, Maryland Institute College of Art, The State University of New York at Albany, University of Wisconsin at Madison, Syracuse University, the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, and the Rhode Island School of Design, among others.

Many alumni from the Department of Art and Design live and work in the St. Louis metropolitan area. Our graduates have found successful careers at many established institutions including Craft Alliance, St. Louis Artworks and the Laumeier Sculpture Park and Museum. They have exhibited in local and regional galleries and museums. Many of our alumni have gone on to receive commissions, become master printers, preparators, gallery directors, designers, museum staff and university educators.

Hands-On Learning

At SIUE, our students have access to the extensive collection of cultural objects housed in the University Museum and installed around campus. This allows for firsthand study of original works of art, as does SIUE's location in the St. Louis metropolitan area. St. Louis is home to many museums and cultural institutions, including the Saint Louis Art Museum (SLAM), Pulitzer Foundation for the Arts, Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis (CAM), Laumeier Sculpture Park, Cahokia Mounds and many others. SIUE students also participate in AIGA student events and have earned internships at the St. Louis Science Center and Missouri Botanical Gardens.

Students in the art and design program at SIUE have the opportunity for their work to be on display in the SIUE Art and Design West Gallery, which is a newly-constructed, 3,600-square-foot exhibition space. The Gallery hosts approximately 10 exhibitions each year, featuring national artists, as well as SIUE students and faculty members. Our students have also been regularly represented in exhibitions at the student gallery at the Edwardsville Art Center.

Our students also have the opportunity to participate in the annual Sculpture on Campus event. This event gives 12 students the opportunity to design and install large-scale outdoor sculpture throughout campus. Students whose designs are chosen receive a stipend and the professional benefits of proposing, designing and installing major sculptural works that are on view for a full year.

Each year, guest jurors award student prizes at the Sculpture on Campus reception after the campus-wide sculpture walk.

To enhance the academic program at SIUE, the Department of Art and Design has robust Exhibition and Visiting Artist Programs. These programs provide an opportunity for both art majors and non-majors to become acquainted with well-known artists and artwork brought to the University, as well as allowing for exhibition opportunities for students and faculty.
