College Student Personnel Administration at SIUE
The college student personnel administration (CSPA) program prepares its graduates for entry and mid-level professional positions in higher education administration in student affairs. At program completion, CSPA students are expected to have the knowledge, skills and perspectives to serve college students and to foster the learning and development of college students in a wide variety of student affairs areas. These areas include, but are not limited to, student life, residence life, career development, advising, financial aid, and athletic programs.

Successful completion leads to a Master of Science in Education (MSEd) in college student personnel administration. The program follows the standards set by the Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education, which ensures academic rigor and quality of learning.

The CSPA program curriculum consists of the following core components: student development; social justice and inclusion; advising and support; and assessment, evaluation and research with an emphasis on critical social justice.

Diversity and critical social justice concepts are addressed across the curriculum specifically within the College Student Development and Diversity in Higher Education courses. The CSPA program is dedicated to addressing the intersectionality of identity, gender expression, gender preference, socioeconomic class, privilege and culture.

Students also develop an individualized capstone project to connect theory to practice under the supervision of faculty members. Students will also complete a comprehensive portfolio, driven by their professional growth and development throughout the program.

Program Learning Outcomes
The CSPA program features a distinctive graduate experience, which requires core coursework, a professional portfolio and a final capstone project. The CSPA curriculum is distributed across the four competencies adapted from ACPA/NASPA Professional Competencies.

Student Affairs and Teaching Practice
- Students explore student populations and theories in EPFR 514.

Social Justice and Inclusion
- Social justice is defined by ACPA/NASPA as the equitable distribution of resources so that all individuals are safe and secure, both physically and psychologically.
- Inclusion is defined by ACPA/NASPA as a process that challenges the normativity of dominant groups by recognizing all groups and populations as diverse relative to one another.
- The CSPA program adheres to these professional definitions in the practice of student affairs and higher education administration.
- Students explore these themes in EDAD 504 and EPFR 522.

Student Development
- The CSPA program addresses concepts and principles of student development and learning theory.
- CSPA faculty members teach students to apply theory to improve and inform.

Students develop an individualized final capstone project focused on contemporary or historical issues in higher education. The final capstone project is a one-year research sequence supervised by a full-time faculty member.

Hands-on Learning

Professional Experiences

Students complete six credit hours of EDAD 54: Practicum & Professional Development. Full-time students fulfill field hours in the summer semester of their first year in the graduate program. The second course is taken during the last semester of the program to focus on professional development within the field of student affairs. Part-time students with professional experience in higher education and student affairs can substitute the practicum sequence with elective coursework.

Graduate Assistantships

Students can apply for assistantships through the graduate school. Most assistantships provide a stipend and tuition waivers subsidize the cost of higher education. Additional off-campus opportunities may be available at partner institutions within the St. Louis region.
