Master of Music at SIUE

The graduate curricula provide advanced preparation for professional work as a teacher and/or performer. Students must successfully complete placement examinations in music theory and music history/literature (or the review courses MUS 500a, b) and a performance audition (if required for the student’s specialization). Certificate degrees are designed to appeal to teachers seeking additional professional training and career opportunities. Many students choose to pursue a certificate alongside an MM, with certain courses counting toward both degrees.

Career Opportunities

Competition in the music industry is keen. Individuals who develop advanced artistic skills in their instrument or voice, or further their abilities in pedagogy have the most professional prospects.

Graduate Assistantships

Graduate Assistantships are available to students pursuing the Master of Music. Positions are available in piano accompanying, Suzuki, jazz, band, orchestra, voice, theory, and history. These provide a tuition waiver for required courses of study and a stipend. Please contact Dr. Andrew Greenwood, graduate program director at agreenw@siue.edu for an application packet.

Emphasis in Suzuki Pedagogy

The Master of Music Program offers an emphasis in Suzuki pedagogy. Graduate assistants teach private lessons, plus a two-hour group class each Saturday.

The weekly schedule also includes:

- A weekly master class
- Three hours per week of Suzuki pedagogy
- SIUE Orchestra
- Required and elective courses
- The specialization awarded may be in performance or music education with an emphasis in Suzuki pedagogy

Registration of Suzuki books 1-10 is arranged with the Suzuki Association of the Americas for either specialization

The examination will be conducted and evaluated by the advisory committee. Students who fail the examination may repeat it upon recommendation of the committee.
