Career Opportunities

Graduates with a Bachelor's degree in International Relations are qualified for many positions in diplomacy or non-profit governmental organizations, and businesses. Students can apply their knowledge of globalization, language, and culture in workplace settings in the areas of foreign service, foreign aid, governmental organizations, and businesses. Examples of government agencies seeking these graduates are the U.S. Department of State, the U.S. Department of Defense, the National Security Agency, and the Central Intelligence Agency. In recent years, there have been hundreds of thousands of export related jobs and employment opportunities with foreign firms in Illinois and in the Saint Louis metropolitan area.

Possible job titles include: foreign service specialist, human rights advocate, administrative/legislative aide, Peace Corps officer, family/community service provider for humanitarian agencies, and business consultant in international firms.
