Life after Cancer Documentary Release Date Has Been Set

After months of planning and fundraising, college students Evan Bartlett and Elijah Accola, were able to make a 51-day journey to the West Coast possible. Their mission was to film and chronicle life after cancer. While on the road they got the stories of more than 25 cancer survivors while at the same time they were able to capture their own story dealing with cancer. They completed their mission and filmed more than 20 hours of footage while on the road. The footage they captured has been compiled into a full length documentary titled, "Discovering the Beating Path."
